Panelists serve staggered three-year terms. The Panel reviews applications in the spring, usually in April or May, a process that involves reading 12 or so applications and then an evening of deliberations. In the fall, the panel will be called on to review and provide comments to three to four grantees' evaluations.

Please indicate your interest and qualifications in a letter that answers these questions:

- Why are you interested in serving on this panel?
- How often and in what ways have you participated in the arts? (i.e., about how often and for what art forms as a practitioner/instructor, and same info as an audience member.
- What if any financial interest might you have in any potential grantee?
- Do you receive income from the arts? In what way?
- What arts organizations do you typically donate to (amounts not necessary)?
- What arts boards have you served on in the past, if any?

I certify that I do not currently serve on any arts board of directors nor am I employed by any arts group that may be eligible to receive funds through this award process.
